I got a lot of feedback on layout this week so I began playing around with things in illustrator. The following 8 images are the designs I came up with.

I ended up deciding on something similar to layout 3, but added highlights to the sorting headers so you know which one is selected. I also made the image of the fabric texture bigger and changed the description to be back beneath the texture image. The shade number is also listed second now in the shade description to add emphasis to the name of the garment and its shade.

IT'S NOT A PHASE MOM

A catalog of the 120 black garments in my closet

| NEWEST GARMENT: 6 Months Old

OLDEST GARMENT: 10 Years Old |

SHADE	GARMENT	AGE	ALPHABETICAL
I wear a lot of black clothing on a daily basis and have found that most of my closet is filled with black items of clothing. However, anyone who has multiple black garments knows that sometimes your blacks don't match; a top and pants might both be black but are often different shades of black. I wanted to quantify and visualize this problem. So, I took photos of each article of black clothing in my closet and wrote a MATLAB script to get the most occurring shade of black in each photo to categorize the shade of each garment. This project catalogs the shades of all the "black" garments in my closet. Click on the headers above to sort the data by shade, garment, age, or alphabetically. Hover over a shade in the spectrum to get more information about the garment and to see the original photo and texture of the garment fabric.

I was also able to figure out how to resize the project by the window size. Some examples are shown below through screenshots of my computer screen.
